COMMON SENSE IS NECESSARY. SAYS RUCKER

Assistant Surgeon General, in Public Health Service, Delivers Address Before Chicago Medical Society.

SEES TENDENCY TO OVERDO MATTERS

Some of the Proposed Health Laws Called Farcical; Difference Between Trained and Untrained Officials.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25 .- Common sense in public health administration was emphasized by Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker of the federal public health service tonight in an address before the Chicago Medical society.

"It is proper that we insist upon abolishing the common drinking cup,' said he. "but when we insist that cups furnished to the general public shall be sterilized, the question assumes a phase as farcical and ridiculous as would be the individual doorknob. Already a good many common-sense laymen are offering the criticism that we are carrying public health measures to an unnecessarily fine point of perfection. While this contention is not granted, it must be admitted that some of the recommendations by untrained enthusiasts bear a close resemblance to the royal society's recommendations with regard to bathing. These, reduced to their lowest terms, are, 'Do not bathe.' Common sense in public health administration comprehends the employment of well-trained health officers at adequate salaries, sufficient funds to administer the laws and specific legislation having as its foundation the basis of fact and practicability.

Common Sense the Guide.

Fact, not theory, must be the basis of our action. Disease is not a ghost, but a reality. The common-sense application of knowledge alone will control it. The sanitary millenium will never come, but research and common-sense administration will bring it nearer."

was great danger that the public health movement might be attended by fads and fanaticism. Two general sets of faults in the sanitary laws of the country, he said, were a scatteration of ideas and loading down the health officer with more power than he could possibly use. Common-sense enforcement of sanitary laws, he declared, meant the maximum of protection with the saving of human lives. This is all very well, but the hard-headed business man is interested in the other returns from his public health investment. We must show in actual figures that public health is public wealth, if we are to meant the maximum of protection with secure funds for the conduct of research or the prophylaxis of disease.

With this assurance came a further declaration that the Canadian Pacific would not send its fleets through the mal even if there were no question bout its rights to do so because the omnany's officials could see no ad-that to be gained by changing their esent routes across the Atlantic and present routes across the Atlantic and Pacific.

This information was received with particular interest because Senator Bristow and others in congress have charged that agitation in favor of repealing the section of the canal act giving free tolls to American vessels was in the interest of the great Canadian rallway and steamship corporation.

It has been suggested in the debates, however, that the transcontinental roads opposed the free tolls provision not so much on account of the advantage American ships would be given over those of other nations, but because of the low rates at which ships passing through the canal free of tolls would be able to carry freight in competition with the rallways.

freight in competition with the rail-ways.

News of the attitude of the Canadian Pacific came today in the form of an official report from that corporation to the Canadian government. After setting forth that the company would not regard it as a good business preposition to send its ships through the canal, the report said, moreover:

"The act of congress of the United States, dealing with the subject of tolls and the regulations for the management and control of the canal, appears to provide some restrictions with reference to the movement of traffic through the canal on vessels owned by railroads in the United States, and this being the case a demand by any foreign railroad company to be placed on a preferential footing would be unwarranted and indefensible."

LEVER BILL MEETS DEFEAT IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Attacked as an invasion of states' rights, the Lever bill to authorize the commissioner of education to co-operate with states, educational institutions and individuals in plans for the eliminating of adult illiteracy in the United States, met overwhelming defeat in the house today after an all-day debate.

In the course of debate Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the appropriations committee, produced letters from college presidents and educational workers throughout the country urging that the increased appropriations asked by the bureau of education allowed. He said they were the result of a campaign carried on by the commissioner of education.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT RECEIVES SETBACK

PARIS, Feb. 25 .- The government sufered a check in the senate today during the debate on the income tax. The min-Dr. Rueker compared the practices of trained and untrained sanitarians. The untrained health officer, he said, establishes a shotgun quarantine, burns far barrels in the streets and washes down houses with bichloride of mercury for a yellow fever outbreak. The trained sanitarian merely destroys the mosquitoes.

NEW PLAN OFFERED BY COMMISSIONER SIMS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Federal approval of railroad securities prior to issue, would carry a moral obligation of the government and inferentially give a certificate of good character to pending issues, interstate Commerce Commissioner Meyer declared today at a hearing on the Sinus bill, and offered an entirely new plan for regulation of railroad financing.

new plan for regulation of railroad financing.

Commissioner Meyer proposed amendment of the interstate commerce law to give the commission authority over transactions and dealings of railroad holding companies, construction, contractors and knowledge of the financial history of tailroads to insure that new securities were used for railroad improvements.

That amendment with enactment of the recommendations of President Taft's railroad securities commission would enable the commission to eliminate stock and bond watering.
